SPORT SNAP SHOTS

by DAN MCCARTY

The old saying, "He who laughs last laughs best," fits the case of Clark Griffith, manager of the Washington Nationals in the American League, and Hank O'Day, manager of the Cincinnati Reds in the National League. Everybody sympathized with poor Griffith early in the season for having passed up the Reds for the Nationals. Washington at that time was in the hardest luck and the Reds were in first place.

both teams for sixteen innings in the Cotton States league game between Columbus and Yazoo City. In the second inning of the first game the Columbus catcher was hurt and there was no one to take his place. The Yazoo City catcher volunteered to keep the game going and it was agreed by all in authority. Yazoo City won both games.

Small indeed is the fame that Mr. Amos Strunk has won in the realm of baseball. It is a safe bet that a goodly majority of the readers of these lines, unless they live in Philadelphia, cannot tell whether Strunk plays baseball for a living, or tiddles whistles, or if so, whether he is with the Philadelphia Athletics. The truth is that Strunk has played baseball with the Philadelphia Athletics for four years. Probably no man in baseball except Connie Mack, until quite recently at least, saw in Strunk the "making" of a great player. He was the rawest kind of an article when he was picked up and mightily few were the games that he participated in up to this season.

Mack is the one man who has believed all along that Strunk would make good. When Captain Danny Murphy was injured a short time ago the wisecracker said: "That finishes the Athletics. Connie hasn't a good man to take his place." But they reckoned not with the youngster whom Connie worked with for the greater part of four years. Amos Strunk was assigned to an outfield berth, and he has proven that Connie's confidence and patience were not in vain.

Strunk's name will be seen often in the box scores after this. It will be come familiar to the fans of baseball.

GOOD HORSE RACES AT DRIVING PARK

Contests Between Horses Were Close and a Fair-sized Crowd Enjoyed the Sport.

Something like a revival of the old days when horse racing was king in Janesville, was seen at the track of the Janesville Park association, where the horse races were held. The crowd in attendance was not large, but was a fair-sized crowd, and considerable interest was displayed in the races, in which there was considerable competition. The only accident of the day occurred to Joe Bassett, of Beloit, a veteran driver, who was driving Ray Rex for John J. Sheridan. As the last heat of the 2:35 pace was about to be started, the wheels of another sulky, locked with the one on which Mr. Bassett was riding, and caused the sulky to flip. The thrill of the sulky, Mr. Bassett, who is seventy-eight years of age, is one of the oldest drivers of the game in this vicinity, and has driven horses on the old track thirty years ago.

The records of the races are given below:

2:25 Trot—Purse $100.
Six Cylinder Pen, owned by John Huggins won the race, taking it in three straight heats.

Hattie C. Strickler, d. 4 4 4
Time: 1:12½, 1:10½, 1:13.

2:35 Pace—Purse $100.

P. Emmet Clippin, d. 2 3 3 3 3
Jasie C. Holt, d. 4 4 4 4 4
Time: 1:10½, 1:10, 1:10½, 1:11, 1:11.

ENDURANCE OF MACHINE SHOWN IN SPEED CONTEST.

"The mingled emotions of the motor world had to subside, before a true appreciation of marvelous performance of the cars in the 500 mile race could be reached," says George M. Dickson.

"A study of the figures after the race, according to Motor-Age, shows that for the actual time that the wheels of their cars were turning round in the race, up to the time that DePalma's went out of the race, Dawson was one minute and 26 seconds faster."

"DePalma is credited with having been forced to quit the race after 480 miles. His elapsed time for this distance was 35:19. For the same distance for the winning National, the elapsed time was 36:50. DePalma was delayed at the repair pits but four minutes while Dawson was delayed at the pits for 14 minutes. Thus we see that DePalma was actually running 35:19 for 480 miles and Dawson 35:25 for the same distance making the actual running time of Dawson one minute and 26 seconds faster than DePalma."

By Seymour, formerly of the Giants, hitting close to the 350 mark for Newark in the International League.

Ell Hoidy has succeeded Danny Long as manager of the San Francisco team in the Pacific Coast League.

Despite the poor showing of the Brooklyn Dodgers Jake Daubert continues to shine in all departments of the game.

Since Russell Ford joined the New York Americans in 1912 he has lost but two games to the Cleveland Naps.

By the way he is stealing bases. It doesn't look as though Sam Crawford, of the Tigers, is slowing down this year.

Mike Donlin has been playing great ball in the field this season and hitting in the neighborhood of .400 for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Young Magee, who is putting up a fancy article of ball for the Cardinals, is not related to Sherwood Magee, the heavy hitting Quaker.

Catcher Numanakor, of the Boston Red Sox, is out of the game nursing a badly split hand, the result of one of Hall's fast lineouts.

Baltimore has sold Pitcher Bob Grant to the Allentown Tri-State League team, and Shortstop Ray Cameron to the Hamilton club of the Canadian League.

Clark Griffith and his Washington outfit are going to cause all kinds of trouble for the American League teams this season. You can read it in the stars.

When he failed to hit safely in a recent game Hank Pory, of the Providence team, cursed his luck and was promptly fined $10 and put out of the game. Moral: Don't talk to yourself out loud on the ball field.

Fights Scheduled for Tonight.
Luther McCarthy vs. Tim Logan, 6 rounds, at Philadelphia.
Jack Harbeck vs. Chapple Homer, 20 rounds, at Juarez, Mex.
Ed. Winters vs. Eddie Johnson, 15 rounds, at Alamosa, Colo.

FISH STORIES.

This is the season of the year for fish stories and they are not a bad thing to sandwich in with the current campaign literature, which is just now so full of bromides that it is a relief to find a vivid imagination and a cheerful prevaricator to do justice to the many tribe. The "Wide World" for July contains the following story, which is entertaining. Porpoises, in Southern waters, play around the bow of a ship for hours.

"Separating" the French from the mainland of Nelson Province runs a narrow arm of sea known as the French Pass. For more than half a century "Porpoise Jack," the famous pilot-ship of New England, has constituted himself "pilot in ordinary" to vessels threading the narrow channel. So zealously has he self-imposed task been performed during the whole of that time, and so short have been the rare vacations he has allowed himself, that his presence in these waters has come to be regarded as an institution, and it is safe to say that his loss by death or desertion would be looked upon as nothing short of a national calamity. The French Pass forms a short cut between the waters of Polorus Sound and Tasman Bay, and coastwise vessels trading to Nelson and Nelson use it in preference to making the longer passage around Cape Stephens.

"At the entrance to the Pass 'Jack' has his regular quarters. From his station in some subaqueous cave at the narrow's he keeps watch and ward on the ships as they pass on their way."

"Let a vessel be seen making for the Pass, and 'Jack' is at once on the qui vive. Darting from his lair, he makes his presence known by short, snappy sounds of pleasure and performing a series of foamy somersaults around the ship's bow. Swimming just ahead, he conveys his charge in safety through the winding passages, leaving her, when open water is reached, with a final snort, by way of farewell, going back to resume his watch at the entrance."

"And this is not a thing of yesterday. When first the vessels of European settlers began to ply along the coast the presence of the strange fish in Polorus waters quickly became known; its actions became matters of comment and discussion among early mariners."

"It was not, however, till within the last twenty-two years, when international and coastal steamers, carrying passengers from port to port, began almost daily to thread the Pass, that 'Porpoise Jack' and his doings became matter of world-wide fame among the maritime folk of the Southern hemisphere."

"Year in, year out, he was at his post. Never a ship went by but 'Jack' was on hand to escort it. Shipmasters looking for his presence. He became almost as much of a sailing-mark as the coastwise lights. The gleam of his white sides, by day, the shining phosphorescence of his foamy wake by night, told shipmasters that 'Jack' was on duty and that all was well."

HARNESSING THE SUN.

An American discoverer created quite a sensation, two years ago, by experiments with the sun's rays as a heating plant, and claimed that the average house was capable of storing enough energy during the day to heat and light it for twenty-four hours. The plan did not seem to work out, but it suggested other experiments, along the same line, and the July "Strand Magazine" tells about a sun-engine, now being built for use in Egypt. The writer says:

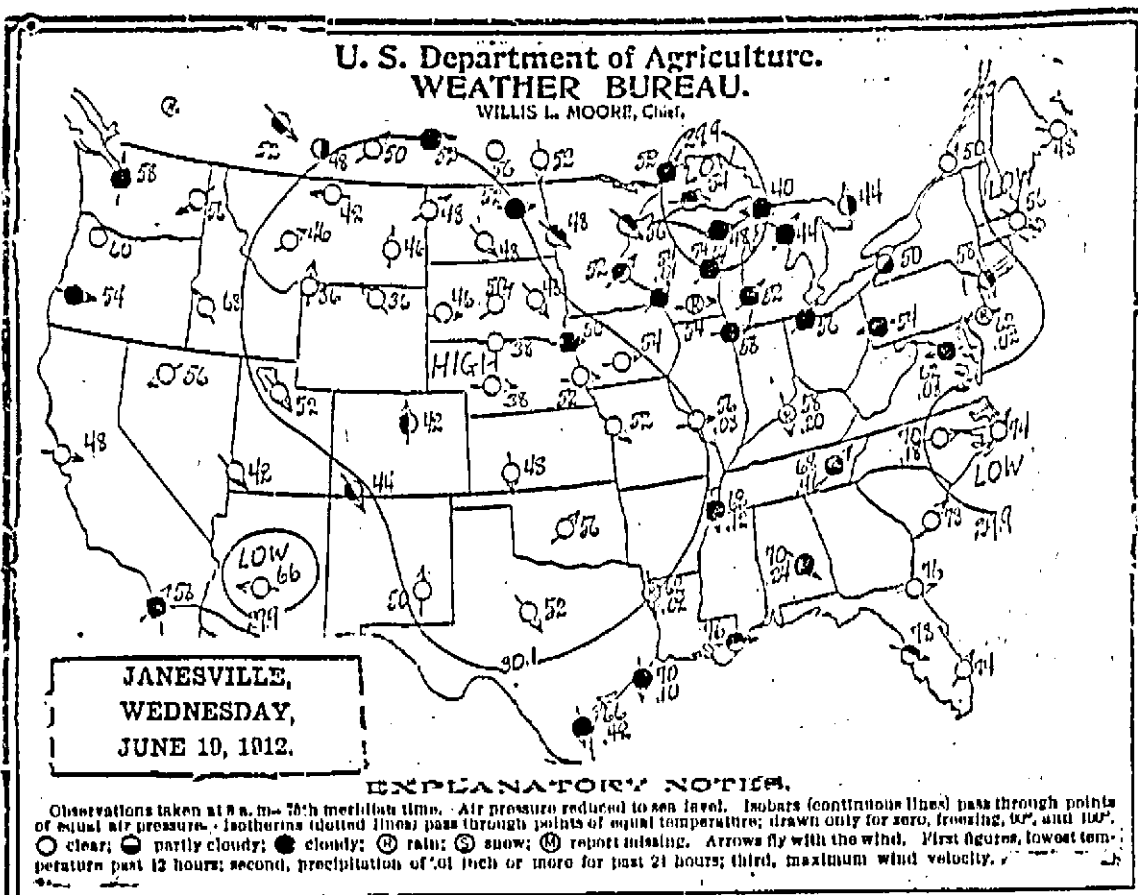

"Mr. Frank Shuman, of Philadelphia, has recently completed and tested one of his sun-engines, which is to be used in Egypt for pumping up water. It can lift three thousand gallons of water every minute to a height of thirty-three feet, when working in favorable weather at Philadelphia. In the hotter climate of Egypt it will naturally do much more work in the same time."

"The most important feature of a sun-engine is the steam-generator. In the engine which Mr. Shuman has built for Egypt the water-boxes, which catch the rays of the sun to generate steam have each a space of six feet between the tops of their two mirrors, and they are mounted together over a space of five thousand square feet. When the mirrors are included the total heat-catching area is about ten thousand three hundred square feet."

"The possibilities of nature's great storehouses have not yet been exhausted, and while efforts to harness the tides, are still in the experimental stage, and extracting gold from the sands of the beach, has principally resulted in extracting money from a confiding public, it is hardly safe to predict failure, along either line."

"The time will come when the great waste of fuel, as now consumed, for both heat and power, will be stopped, for some means will be discovered to protect the supply and render more effective service to the consumer. 'The world do move,' and it always moves in the right direction."

"The action of the governor and the insurgent delegates can mean nothing else than an open break with La Follette and a division of the party

A small barometric depression that has developed or moved in from the north over Lake Superior and has caused cloudiness and light showers in this vicinity. The area of low barometer in the East has moved slightly eastward, but another depression appears off the coast of North Carolina. The area of high atmospheric pressure in the West is still over the Rockies and the Plains, and is accompanied by fair and continued cool weather.

In Wisconsin. There are those who think it is for the best. Every few years some little fellow gets the idea he is bigger than his leader and he bolts. It has happened before and may happen again, but the following of La Follette never has been so great as it is at the present. Perhaps the governor thought La Follette was on the decline. This paragraph refers to Mr. Cochrane and the men who had the temerity to vote with him yesterday. The little fellows, already sidetracked, are men like ex-Governor Board, Congressman Cooper and Leinroot, and many others who refused to be coerced. Let the good work go on.

It is all right to call a man a liar at long range, but when you meet him face to face, he is not likely to band you a favor. That was one of the troubles which annoyed Colonel Roosevelt yesterday. The national committee was a different audience from the auditorium crowd of the night before, and while the galleries were filled with noisy shouters, the men who had the business in hand were simply plain, everyday liars, and so continued to saw wood.

The coal strike and prospective advance in price, has caused an Englewoodman with a fertile brain to suggest that a great saving would result by firing the coal beds and extracting the gases for fuel, thus saving the expense of mining and transportation. He claims that the scheme is practical and in time will be adopted. Stranger things have happened.

The most significant feature of yesterday's doings, at the Chicago convention, so far as Wisconsin is concerned, was the split in the state delegation. La Follette was unable to hold his forces together, and about half his strength went to McGovern. This means war to the knife, for there is no middle ground. The man who refuses to bow to the will of the supreme dictator, is slated for retirement.

Henry F. Cochrane of Milwaukee, La Follette's right bower, and the man who was to place the senator in nomination, resigned from the delegation at midnight, last night, and will cast in his lot with the McGovern faction. That's the sort of a fight that ought to be encouraged.

"Short Jaunts For Busy People"

The question of where to pleasantly and profitably spend a few days or weeks, as the case may be, is of interest to a great many people at this time of the year. During the next two months more people are taking vacations than at any other time and they are desirous of securing information which will guide them as to where their vacation days will be spent this year.

A little booklet entitled "Short Jaunts for Busy People" we believe will help solve the problem in many cases. In it are taken up with descriptive and illustrative matter the nearby resorts in Illinois and Wisconsin, which are within easy reach of those who wish the benefit of complete change of scene and do not wish to take a long trip to secure it.

One is surprised to note the large number of places which are possible for week end, or vacation trips. Wisconsin has its share of summer resorts and these as well as those in Illinois are described briefly. The Gazette Travel Bureau has a quantity of this material on hand descriptive of nearby summer resorts as well as the numerous other places all over the country which attract the traveler. The public is invited to look over this material, any of which is free to those interested.

OFFICIAL GREETING TO VISITING EAGLES

JUDGE KAREL SPEAKS

J. J. CUNNINGHAM FOR LOCAL AERIE AND MAYOR FATHERS FOR CITY EXTEND WELCOME.

Milwaukee Jurist Prominent in State Order Gave Fine Address at Meeting at Myers Theatre Last Evening.

Official welcome from the local aerie and from the city of Janesville, who are hosts to the delegates to the annual state convention of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, was extended by J. J. Cunningham and Mayor James A. Fathers in an eloquent and fitting manner at the public meeting at the Myers theatre last evening.

The gathering was opened by a prayer by the Rev. J. W. Laughlin, pastor of the Presbyterian church, and John C. Nichols, secretary of the state order and head of the local aerie, presided as chairman and introduced each speaker with appropriate remarks.

Mr. Cunningham, in his address, recounted the 724 efforts of Janesville Aerie No. 724 to secure the state convention for this city. The same delegates were sent back to the convention year after year to urge the cause of their home town until finally at Marshfield last year their plan of prophecy was fulfilled. "That the day of fulfillment is at hand," said the speaker, "and the day of fulfillment is at hand. We described to you the many beauties and advantages of our city and the cordial greeting you will receive. It is now for us to make good."

"We, citizens of Janesville, have learned that you are a great order; that you men have been building a bulwark of fraternalism which radiates its good will and good fellowship everywhere; we have learned of your work and your aspirations and it is an honor to the city to be the host to these delegates, and in behalf of the local aerie, I bid you a most cordial welcome."

Mayor James A. Fathers, on the part of the city, gave a fraternal address of welcome. As a fraternal order the Eagles must stand, he said, for that great brotherhood of mankind; the great motto words of the order, "Liberty, Justice, Truth, and Equality," have great significance and indicate the ideals of the order. Mr. Fathers described at some length the advantages of the city which is their host. Its natural beauty, its industrial wealth, its attractive streets, homes and public buildings, its cordial and open-hearted people, were all factors which made Janesville an ideal place to hold a state gathering of any lodge. This is not a walled city, said the speaker, and it is unnecessary to hand the guests a key to the city. The homes stand open and the city bids the members of the F. O. E. a hearty welcome.

Edwin E. Nash, chaplain of the Milwaukee aerie, favored the audience with a recitation which was thoroughly enjoyed, after which Chairman Nichols introduced Judge John C. Karel of Milwaukee, who responded to the words of welcome as heartily extended.

Judge Karel is a man of pleasing personality and radiant good humor. He has an attractive and pleasing stage presence and he is an order of ability. In beginning his address he stated that to such expressions of cordial welcome as he had heard from Brother Cunningham and Mayor Fathers, he replied from the depth of his heart and affectionate regard of every citizen in this great commonwealth to the Janesville citizens. The delegates were present, not as Eagles alone, but as friends and neighbors who were glad to enjoy the hospitality of their neighboring city.

Judge Karel spoke of the great order which they represented. He extolled its unostentatious democracy, its unselfishness, its warmth of fellowship, its radiating good fellowship. It was an order, said the speaker, which was open to all men of all walks of life; it recognized no class distinction or aristocracy, and its only requirement for membership was that of character and manhood. It has been a potent factor in dispelling much of the haze of sectarianism and class feeling, and its genial optimism stands for progress and the uplift of society and the nation.

Hon. Calvin Stewart of Kenosha was unable to be present last evening and his place on the program, Vice President P. Pierrolo of Ashland, past president and deputy grand president of the grand aerie, offered a few remarks. He was pleased to be in Janesville and thanked the citizens for the cordial hospitality which was witnessed on every hand.

The closing address last evening was given by Theodore M. Toll, president of the Wisconsin state aerie. He spoke in fluent and eloquent address expressing his appreciation of the city's welcome and dwelling on the greatness of the order he had the honor of representing.

The Lotus Male quartet, composed of Messrs. Taylor, Thome, Van Pool and Schoof, favored the audience with several selections and graciously responded to several encores. The singing is always delightful and the delegates present were very appreciative.

Number of Them Known to be in City—Man on Incoming Train A Victim—Good Order in City.

As a number of pickpockets are known to be in the city, Chief of Police Appleby desires to warn the public to keep a close watch for them, especially in street crowds and at the Auditorium tonight when the boxing bout is held. No arrests had been made up to a late hour this afternoon. Two and three officers have been stationed at the busiest corners, such as the intersection of Milwaukee and Main streets and Milwaukee and Franklin streets to keep the traffic moving and protect pedestrians. Chief of Police Appleby has been keeping in close touch with his patrolmen and has had the crowds constantly under his eye.

Mounted police patrolled the district during the day and there was no further disorder.

CUBAN REBELS BURN AMERICAN PROPERTY

Buildings of Panupa-Manganese Company Near Santiago Destroyed—Many Insurgents Have Surrendered.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Santiago, Cuba, June 19.—The building of the Panupa-Manganese company, an American concern, situated near La Moya, about seven miles from Santiago, was burned by the Cuban insurgents at night yesterday. A detachment of forty men under command of Captain Alexander A. S. Williams arrived here today on a special train from Guantanamo to reinforce the garrison at the firm's mines and to protect the property of the iron company. As the result of the late amnesty proclamation, three hundred insurgents came in today and surrendered to military authorities. Of this number, however, not one brought in any weapons. This fact caused great uneasiness among the whites who regard it as an indication that the actual rebel forces are not diminishing.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

DEMOCRATS GATHER AT BALTIMORE FOR COMING CONVENTION

One Thousand and Seventy-four Delegates Will Rally Tuesday to Support of Favorite Son.

Baltimore, Md., June 19.—One thousand and seventy-four delegates will assemble in the city next Tuesday to name a candidate to run as the democratic party's choice for president of the United States.

These delegates represent the democratic voters of forty-eight states, the District of Columbia, the District of Alaska and the territorial possessions of Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippines. The number of delegates exclusive of the territories and insular possessions is twice the number of United States senators and members of the house of representatives.

Each delegate to the national convention represents a section of the country peopled by approximately 91,072,266 people (according to the census of 1910), of whom at least 27,000 are male adults of the voting age.

The 1,074 delegates meet to select a man who will represent the ideas of the democratic voters as to necessary qualifications for a president of the United States and to voice their ideas as to general policies which should be followed by the chief executive for the four years succeeding March 4, 1913.

The delegates will vote these policies in a series of resolutions, which, taken together, is popularly called a "platform." They are also to select a candidate for vice president to serve in case of the death or inability of the president.

Theoretically the choice of the nominees and the framing of the platform are matters which the delegates take up in order to reach subjects, and upon which they have varying opinions; but practically, and as a result of widespread discussion in the daily press and elsewhere, there are always of late years some well settled ideas on the subject of candidates and issues, and a certain unanimity on many matters from the outset. In the present instance, however, considerably more doubt surrounds the actions and decisions of the convention than has been the case for many years. It is generally admitted that the choice of candidates and the framing of the platform will depend in a great measure upon the results of a republican national convention now in session in Chicago.

The democratic convention nominates presidential candidates by a two-thirds vote, therefore the winner in the convention must secure seven hundred and sixteen votes. No candidate in the race has anywhere near enough instructed votes to secure the nomination on first ballot. In the order of their strength, as indicated by the number of delegates pledged to support them, the leading candidates are: Champ Clark of Missouri, Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama and Judson Harmon of Ohio.

The standing of these four candidates indicates their relative strength on the first ballot in the convention next week. It is known, however, that after the first ballot, when about two hundred uninstructed delegates and a scattering vote of ninety delegates for Governors Fox of Massachusetts, Baldwin of Connecticut, Marshall of Indiana, and Burke of North Dakota will be cast. These four favorite sons are expected to drop out of the contest after the first ballot, leaving the fight to the remaining four candidates: Speaker Clark, Governor Wilson, Governor Harmon and Representative Underwood. While the second ballot will probably disclose the actual strength of these four candidates, it will probably require a number of ballots before the leading candidate obtains the two-thirds vote necessary to nominate.

In the event that the convention is unable to make a choice from among the leading candidates and a deadlock ensues, one of the other four candidates may be named, or what is considered even more likely, a "dark horse" may capture the nomination. In connection with the talk of a "dark horse" the name of William J. Bryan and Mayor C. Gaynor of New York City are most frequently mentioned.

National Chairman Mack of Buffalo, Secretary Woodson of Kentucky and the members of the committee on arrangements are in the city and tomorrow a meeting will be held to complete the final details of the convention in which the delegates will stand in readiness for the gathering of delegates. Headquarters of the national committee, and of the several presidential candidates are running full blast. The entire business section of Baltimore is putting on gala attire and before the end of the week the delegates, marching clubs, political leaders and lay visitors will be marching into the city by the hundreds. It will be Baltimore's first experience in entertaining a national political convention since Horace Greely was nominated for president by the democrats assembled here an even forty years ago.

COCHEMS WRITES ON SITUATION IN STATE

ers, former President Roosevelt, has spoken in this state and in other states, and had written for "The Outlook" articles commending a work in Wisconsin and in the United States of the progressive movement in the nation. During the election while last a candidate for the United States senate, George L. Record, Clifford Pinchot, Senator Hiram Johnson, Senator Francis J. Heney and others were in this state campaigning in his cause. Up to the time that Senator La Follette spoke at the meeting of the Periodical Publishers' association in Philadelphia, there had been no wavering in the ranks. At that time a number of states had cast their vote for candidates; the primaries were imminent in many more states in which the selection of delegates would be decisive in determining whether President Taft should again be nominated as leader of the republican party. At that time, it is asserted, the very close friends of Senator La Follette, members of his most intimate official family, concluded that the conditions were such that the Senator could secure sufficient delegates in the national convention to effect his nomination. At that time it was asserted by Mr. McCormick, Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Pinchot and others—those in the immediate control of Mr. La Follette's campaign, and presumably closest to him—determined that Roosevelt should become a candidate, and that the progressive cause might still be saved in the national convention—a fact which appeared hopeless, unless Roosevelt consent to become a candidate. Shortly after this Mr. Walter Houser, signed a statement, published in the press of the country, releasing the supporters of Senator La Follette to any other candidate who took high grounds as to progressive principles. Shortly thereafter, Col. Roosevelt made his "Chlorine of Democracy" speech at the constitutional convention at Columbus, O., and promptly followed the announcement of his candidacy. Sometime thereafter Senator La Follette disclaimed the arrangements made, as it was understood, with the approval of Mr. Hiram Johnson, Mr. Houser and Mr. Leavitt, and announced that no one had a right to speak for him—a fact which can not be gainsaid.

Teddy Won Support

"When the Roosevelt candidacy had been launched it found prompt and immediate support of all the conspicuous national leaders of the movement in the country save a few. Among those who had supported Senator La Follette, who saw in the Roosevelt candidacy the only opportunity to save the day were Gov. Hiram Johnson of Wisconsin, former Senator Chandler, Clifford Pinchot, Ames Pinchot, George L. Record of New Jersey, James Garfield of Ohio, Walter Brown of Ohio, Senator Nevers of Indiana, Mr. Jones, progressive candidate for governor in Illinois, Senator Clapp of Minnesota, Senators Cummins and Kenyon of Iowa, Gov. Stubbins of Kansas, Senator Hiram Johnson of Wisconsin, Senator William Kent, Congressmen of Nebraska, and a score of others—progressive figures in the nation. They remained in the ranks of the La Follette followers among the conspicuous men of the country only Louis Brandeis, Charles Crane of Chicago, Senator Gronna of North Dakota, and Mr. Spreckles of San Francisco. The Roosevelt candidacy brought to his support, moreover, a large number of vital political forces in the country, which could not be aroused until that event had occurred.

Cal's Roosevelt Progressive

"It is now charged that Col. Roosevelt and all of these gentlemen were in a conspiracy to use Senator La Follette as a decoy, but that when it became apparent that he was gaining strength the conspiracy was expected to betray him and to support Roosevelt. It is alleged further that Col. Roosevelt is not the type of progressive that can be approved by friends of this progressive movement. I can not accord with this view.

"First—I refuse to believe that this great group of distinguished men deliberately planned the betrayal of Senator La Follette, with whom they had cast their fortunes in the house of representatives and the national senate in the advancement of progressive legislation; the fact being that today every member of the progressive group of which Senator La Follette had become leader in the senate, with the exception of Senator Gronna of North Dakota, have cast their fortunes with Mr. Roosevelt, while not a member of the house of representatives of the group of over forty progressive republicans has continued in the fold for Senator La Follette.

"Nor can I accord with the view that President Roosevelt is not a progressive worthy of the support of Wisconsin or of any other type of progressive. It is unnecessary to review his record or to cite the principles which he has announced as the basis of his candidacy. That he is a progressive is best evidenced by the enemies he has made and by the threat of the old reactionary guard everywhere in this country to defeat his candidacy.

Principle Higher Than Man

"My reflections have led me to this conclusion, having in mind particularly the letter addressed by Senator La Follette to Mr. Spreckles of San Francisco, prior to the California campaign, in which Senator La Follette bases his charge that he was betrayed upon the ground that he announced that if he entered the campaign he would remain in the fight to a finish. I do not believe that it is consistent with the heretofore high ground which the senator has taken in this movement we are taught first in the language of Senator La Follette himself that 'the will of the people should be the law of the land' and that the progressive movement must be the expression of the majority will of the people. What right, then, can any man have, merely because of his personal position in a fight to jeopardize and perforce destroy the forward movement of this cause because of alleged infidelity to his personal cause of another man or men?

"If it be true that the progressive movement is such that it is not safe in the hands of Col. Roosevelt and the group of progressives with whom he is surrounded then it must be equally true that there can never come a moment of cohesion and harmony that will give legislative expression to its purpose, for we would never succeed in electing man answering to the ideal in government, the number of a few persons in the house of representatives and one or two members of the United States senate.

"And further, if there is to be no concession, but the delegation instructed that the candidates are to stand out, refusing to confer to the bitter end, then there can never be a majority arrived at in a national convention, unless it be upon the first ballot, because if it is treason to one's best judgment as to the proceedings of the convention develop—if infidelity refusal to confer, the vote would be the same at the end of a year's session as it was at the beginning.

Choice of Progressives

"I do not know personally whether Col. Roosevelt is the ideal leader of the new democracy. I only know that he is the choice overwhelmingly, as events have developed at this time, of the leading thinkers in the progressive movement of this country, and the express choice of the progressives among the common people of this country.

"It is very clear now that unless the various progressive camps are reconciled to a common purpose, President Taft and his steam roller will give over the control of the republican party to the reactionaries in the national convention. If Senator La Follette and our delegation would forgo our personal preferences and yield to the vital requirements of the situation now it would, I believe, inject such a tremendous and persuasive force into the convention that we could defeat the nomination of President Taft. If he is nominated and our position of hostility continues, the breach in the progressive ranks will prevent a successful working relation among ourselves as to foreclose the future for years to come. The maddest vision I do not believe that President Taft can be elected if nominated.

Bob Hay Fought Control

"On the other hand, Senator La Follette has it in his hands to write his own platform for the national republican convention, control the temporary organization, become the leader of the progressive movement in the national congress, and entitle himself to the nomination for the presidency four years hence. It is an opportunity which has come to few men in the history of the American government.

"Stephen A. Douglas, defeated by Lincoln when the war broke out, reached out his hands straight from his heart, to his lifelong opponent and promised his entire service to the preservation of the union. It was unexpected; it was the conduct of a great man. It was the noblest act in the life of Douglas.

"I am further moved in this disposition by the fact that its expression through the republican party, a third party is the hope of dreamers. The democratic party, finding its delegates support in the southern states which are actively antislavery and in sympathy with special interests, and which, moreover, are democratic because of considerations having no relation to this progressive movement, but because of the color question in the South, can not become the vehicle of this great movement, which is crying for prompt, early and decisive consummation.

"Therefore, conscious as I am of the bitter personal criticism which this action may incur for myself, I must decline to execute a commission the terms of which, as the program is planned would cause me to stultify myself and be at war with my own political judgment and conscience.

"You will, therefore, kindly comply with my suggestion that my alternate act for me, and that the delegation select some other person to represent them as a member of the committee on rules, to which position I was selected by the steering committee.

"The policy adopted by the Wisconsin delegation was the result of a selfish, hysterical plan to beat Col. Roosevelt. They were perfectly willing to go down in the wreckage and surrender the party to President Taft and the country to the democrats to effect this personal revenge. No man can question this. With every progressive in the convention from Maine to California voting for the home La Follette candidate, with the delegation of the twelve great primary voting states of the republican column voting for McGovern, from Wisconsin alone came a sour protest against their own progressive governor as a candidate for temporary chairman. It was decided Monday night that the delegation would not as a delegation offer a candidate for temporary chairman. That decision was a purely perverse selfish attitude.

"Therefore, I offered Mr. McGovern's name as an individual delegate. Mr. Houser, after the galaxy of the leading progressives of this nation, had seconded the nomination, deliberately struck down the only chance of preventing Mr. Taft's seating in the convention and restoring the bitterness of the convention from which alone La Follette could hope in a deadlock to gain strength. The whole plan was a fraud and a betrayal. Mr. La Follette will have the distinction of again becoming the lone figure of the United States senate.

"The manager, Houser, has deliberately robbed him and Wisconsin of its position of leadership and the organization built up during eight years. It was part of a cold blooded campaign begun over ten days ago.

aquawkers, tin horns and joyous shouts.

Indications early in the morning were of a possible shower to spoil the arrangements for the parade in the afternoon, but just before noon the sun came out to make everything perfect for the day.

Various arrangements have been made for the entertainment of the visitors during the day and evening. Besides the parade at two o'clock, there were two aeroplane flights by H. Orrin Lawrence of the Mills Aviation company at the Fair Grounds, Mr. Mills arising from the park and clearing the grounds several times before descending; vaudeville artists at the stands erected at the corner of North Main and North First streets, on South River street in front of the Auditorium building and at the corner of West Milwaukee and Academy streets.

At half past six o'clock this evening there will be a banquet for the delegates in Eagles' hall and eight o'clock the various bands will take part in a competitive concert, a prize of fifty dollars being offered for the band playing the best selection. The official dance for the convention delegates and visitors will be held at Central hall at nine o'clock with Hatch's orchestra and Edward Allington, zymphonic player.

Besides these there will be the boxing bout at the auditorium building on South River street, the Janesville Athletic club having arranged a good card for the evening. The bouts will commence at eleven o'clock.

Business Sessions

At the business sessions of the state aeris yesterday afternoon three Janesville men, M. J. Stigula, Louis F. Auer and Fred J. Schmidt, were appointed as Inner Guard, Outside Guard, and Conductor of the state aeris respectively, and action was taken this morning to make the offices of inner guard, outer guard and chaplain, elective instead of appointive. It was also suggested that a proposition be submitted to the grand aeris of the Eagles which will be held in Cleveland, that a bureau of Economy and Efficiency be named to audit the accounts of all past grand aeris to discover how the grand aeris could be conducted more economically, and to report the result of their findings to each individual aeris. Other business transacted at the meeting this morning was the reading of the reports of State President, T. M. Toll of Milwaukee, of State Secretary John C. Nichols of this city, and of the constitution and by-laws committee. The report of the president showed the order to be in a flourishing condition. During the past year seven new aeris have been added, and the total membership is now about 8300. The business meeting was adjourned to eight o'clock this evening.

It was expected that Grand Worthy President E. Haring would be here today to address the delegates and give Dolly and Her Breakfast Cap.

"UPPER Patel look at that, will you?" said John, laying down his fork, and gazing at Dolly, as she fluttered into the dining room wearing a "Ruffy breakfast cap."

"Look at what?" asked Dolly guilelessly.

"That thing on your head."

"You'd rather look at that, than at my hair the way it is," said Dolly. "Mother looks nice," observed the kid.

"Of course she does," replied John. "Mother always looks nice. But oh, the way of achieving it."

"But I didn't have time to comb my hair."

"Why didn't you get up sooner?"

"I went to sleep again."

The logic of this being inanswerable, John munched his roll in silence. "It's only a new way it's breaking out," he said after a few minutes. "What?" asked the kid excitedly, thinking of measles and scarletina. John didn't heed him.

"At one time," he went on continuing his monologue, "it's rats and puffs until a woman's head looks like an overfed pin-cushion covered with a mass of sausages."

"Ugh!" said Dolly.

"That's just it. But a woman never thinks of appropriateness. She just goes ahead and gets herself up in the style, regardless of what it may be like. Now that thing fits a garden party, but it doesn't fit the breakfast table."

"But it's too dainty," said Dolly. "I was a long while picking it out. That lace is too sweet for anything, and those rosebuds—"

"Of course," interrupted John, "I'm no judge. But let me tell you this. If men had the choosing of women's clothes, you wouldn't see women wearing hats that make them look hump-backed."

"Hats that make them look hump-backed?"

"Yes. The kind that come so nearly to the shoulders that the shoulders try to go up to meet them, and there you are—a near-hump-back, and skirts so narrow, they have to toddle along in them like a Jap."

"And I notice now," went on John, "that they are putting a little doodle on the front like a blacksmith's apron, and another in the back like a loose sail, fanning in the wind; though what they are for the masculine mind, cannot conceive. They certainly are not beautiful."

"But I notice," said Dolly sweetly, "that the women dressed that way are the ones the men look after and flock around and invite to all the swell affairs."

John picked up his newspaper.

"I can't imagine you or any other man," went on Dolly, "taking a woman to the Horae Show, for instance, who had her hair—just her own hair—done up in a nice, little, tight knob behind, who wore a plain little bonnet tied on,—that's the comfortable way,—and a flax skirt she could walk in, and a loose, easy waist."

"And I know very well," she concluded as they rose from the table, "if I had come down without this cap on, and with my hair all frowzy—"

"Let's see what it does look like anyway," teased John, reaching toward the cap.

"No you don't," she replied, clapping her hands on her head. "My ambition is always to appear adorable in your sight!"

"You always are adorable," he said kissing her good-bye. "And wear the breakfast cap if you want to. I don't care a hang. It really is fetching."

your home. Better do without the money, even if it is needed, than to bandish peace between your husband and yourself. Your husband may have heard things about this young man, that he doesn't wish to tell you. He may feel, too, that he does not want a third party in his home life.

A young boarder has been the cause of a good deal of trouble in more than one household, especially where there is a young and good-looking wife or a jealous husband. If you want to earn some extra money at home, perhaps you can find some sewing to do, you may have a talent for making especially nice cookies, doughnuts, cakes, etc., which your neighbors would buy from you. See your wife to work, but above all things, keep peace and confidence between your husband and yourself.

A word of warning—Don't take a young woman boarder, either, that kind is just as dangerous as a young man boarder.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I would like to wear short-sleeved blouses, but my arms are covered with dark hair and look ugly. Is there any way I can get rid of the hair? It is so embarrassing and I know people make fun of me because of it.

UNHAPPY.

I do not know of any way of permanently ridding yourself of the hair. There are depilatories sold, but they are painful to use, as a rule, and have only a temporary effect. Suppose you bleach the hair with peroxide? Then it will not show so plainly. Keep on applying peroxide until hairs are light enough. Perhaps you only imagine that others make fun of you. I would not think about that at all, if I were you. Just be cheerful and sweet and lovable, and nobody is going to care whether your arms are hairy or not. Of course there are always some unamiable people, but one doesn't need to consider them.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: A young man I know has left town, and I am not going to write to him. He hasn't written yet. Do you suppose he meant that I should write to him first?

TESSIE.

Not if he likes and respects you, my dear. And you won't write to him first either, if you care anything for his regard. He will write to you if he wants to. If he doesn't, just forget all about it.

A WOMAN'S OBSERVATIONS

Edna K. Wooley

Mrs. Gillies did not think much of the prowess of Mr. Gillies.

Out of eight applicants the wife selected a large young man who looked capable and who declared that he would derive so much pleasure from such employment that he was willing to do it for $5, and not damage Mr. Gillies permanently at that.

When Mr. Gillies arrived home that evening instead of finding a meek small wife ready for her daily licking, he encountered the large young man.

When the large young man finished with Mr. Gillies, he had done such a good job that Mrs. Gillies insisted upon paying him the full amount of $10.

Now wasn't this much better than depending upon papa, or going home to mother, or seeking a remedy in court?

"The police courts, throughout the land, have many wife-beaters in the daily orbit. It's a common complaint—so common that a restriction of the old custom of flogging has several times been recommended as the proper punishment for wife-beating."

But the independent western woman has not a new precedent—she has a wife-beater, anyway, and an advertisement will always bring enough busy ones who will take a particular delight in lambasting the man who beats a woman, even if she is only his wife. A husband once made to realize this will curb his enthusiasm the next time he feels like having a little exercise at the expense of his better half.

The Evening Chit-Chat

A WORD ON PARENT MANAGING.

IT is often most interesting to observe how easily a clever child can manage its parents. Some of our modern children are adepts in all the branches of the art, but one particular trick which almost every child knows is that of distracting his parents' attention from a command which he does not wish to obey.

A little neighbor of mine nominally goes to bed at half past seven o'clock. I happened to be calling there the other evening at about that hour and witnessed a little drama, the like of which evidently takes place quite regularly. The clock in the hall chimed half past seven and a worried expression crossed my hostess' face. "Will you excuse me a mo-

Roast Chicken Is Tenderest When Cooked

In Union Cookery Bags

Do you know that when the French chefs cook a fowl they often wrap it in fold after fold of linen—and then cook it for hours and hours. They do this to make every ounce of the meat so tender that it almost falls to pieces. That is the way you and all others like roast fowl—so tender that you can cut the meat with the side of a fork.

And now we have the ideal, perfect way to secure this result without losing any of the flavor or nutriment through over-cooking. Roast the fowl in a Union Cookery Bag. No pan is used. Prepare and season, and stuff if desired, the fowl as ordinarily—then just slip it into a Union Cookery Bag. A Free Book gives full directions for using the bag and sealing the end of it over the fowl with wire clips or pins.

Union Cookery Bags make roasting a chicken, turkey, duck or any fowl a pleasure—no basting, no opening of hot oven in your face, no pans to wash, and your first fowl cooked in a Union Cookery Bag will be the brownest, tenderest, juiciest—most delicious—that you have ever observed on your table.

A Free Book—with many recipes, written from the experience of expert chefs in Europe and America—has just been published, telling you everything you want to know and exactly how to use Union Cookery Bags for cooking all fowls. These books are on free distribution at the office of this paper. Call and get your copy—just ask for the Paper Bag Cookery Book. Be sure to get this valuable Free Book.

Then go to your grocery, meat shop, hardware or stationery store—and ask for Union Cookery Bags. The cost is only a quarter for a package of liberally assorted sizes. If no one of these dealers near you has Union Cookery Bags, insist that the one you trade with must shall get them for you immediately from his wholesale house.

Cook in Union Cookery Bags—save money, time and work—and enjoy the new wholesomeness and tastefulness of foods, so cooked that they retain all their rich flavor and nutriment. Order a package of Union Cookery Bags of your dealer today.

These Union Cookery Bags are the same that have been demonstrated under the auspices of this newspaper. Thousands of housewives are using them and would now cook in no other way. Call at this office for a Free Copy of the Paper Bag Cookery Book.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES.

THE SLEEPING CAR.

(By Howard L. Rann.)

THE SLEEPING CAR.

THE sleeping car is a long, narrow establishment devoted to the manufacture of pneumonia and the human snore. In the daytime it is a quiet, restful retreat, where one can withdraw within himself and commune with uncensored literature, but at night it becomes vocally the conversation of people who enter at 2 a. m. and talk about the play in loud, raucous tones. After the first sleep, who is heavy sleepers who have two weeks behind his schedule turns loose a snore which sounds like playing ten pins with a tin tub, causing a earnestly endeavoring to throttle a night mare. Many nervous travelers, after listening to the strains of a base-burning snore with tremolo attachment, have arisen, rigidly on his spine in an upper berth and coined some about, unheeded words in a strange tongue.

The sleeping car snore is a terrible weapon in the hands of a man who is feeling of sweet peace to pervade the premises.

Every sleeping car is accompanied by a negro porter who is generally taken for a brunet, and who is hired by the company to make the beds and see that the temperature in the car doesn't go above 62.

Some porters are subject to sudden attacks of ungovernable humor, during which they become very hard of hearing and allow guests who belong to the Anti-Tipping League, to freeze slowly to the counterpane.

A sleeping car berth is harder to locate than a pure politician. It is a painful sight to see a third patron slide out of the smoking apartment when the lights are low and claw his way into the wrong berth, only to emerge a moment later with the grateful look of a man who has mistaken a hand-painted dolly for a napkin.

The most cheerful feature of a sleeping car is the upper berth. It requires the agility of a Swiss goat to get into one of these berths without being unseated, and nobody but a contortionist can disrobe in one without telescoping himself with considerable aplomb.

When somebody invents a sleeping car which is, not only with unstrained cinders and the unrestrained cuckoo of theater parties, everybody will ride in it.

The Three Guardsmen

... By ...
ALEXANDRE DUMAS

"Was he not a fine looking man of lofty stature?"

"Yes."

"Of pale complexion and brown hair?"

"Yes, yes; that is he. Now is it, sir, that you are acquainted with this man? If ever I should meet him again, and I will find him, I swear."

"He was waiting for a woman," continued Treville.

"He, at least, departed immediately after having conversed for a minute with the one for whom he appeared to have been looking. He gave her a box; told her that box contained her instructions and desired her not to open it before she arrived in London."

"Was this woman English?"

"He called her 'maddy'."

"It is he! It must be he!" murmured Treville. "I thought he was still at Brussels!"

"Oh, sir, if you know who and what this man is," cried D'Artagnan, "tell me who he is and whence he is! I will then release you from all your promises—even that of procuring my admission into the musketeers, for, before everything, I am desirous to avenge myself!"

"Beware, young man!" cried De Treville. "If you see him coming on one side of the street pass by on the other! Do not cast yourself against such a rock. He would break you!"

"That thought will not prevent me," replied D'Artagnan. "If ever I should happen to meet with him."

"In the meantime, if you will take my advice, you will not seek him," said Treville.

All at once the captain stopped, as if struck by a sudden suspicion. This great hatred which the young traveler manifested so loudly for this man, who—a rather improbable thing—had stolen his father's letter from him! Was there not some porridge concealed under this hatred? Might not this young man be sent by his enemies? Might he not have come for the purpose of laying a snare for him? "I know he is a Gascon," reflected he, "but he may be one for the cardinal as well as for me. Let us try him. My friend," said he slowly, "the king and the cardinal are the best of friends. Their apparent bickerings are only feints to deceive fools. He assured that I am devoted to both these all powerful masters."

"Now, young man, regulate your conduct accordingly, and if you entertain, whether from your family, your relations or even from your instincts, any of these emotions which we see constantly breaking out against the cardinal, bid me attend and let us separate. I will add you in many ways, but without attaching you to my person."

Treville said to himself: "If the cardinal has set this young fox upon me he will certainly not have failed, he who knows how bitterly I exorcise him, to tell his spy that the best means of making his court to me is to rail at him."

It, however, proved otherwise. D'Artagnan answered with the greatest simplicity:

"I am come to Paris with exactly such intentions, sir. My father advised me to stoop to nobody but the king, M. the Cardinal, and you, whom he considered the three first personages in France."

D'Artagnan added M. de Treville to the others, as may be perceived, but he thought this adjunction would do no harm.

M. de Treville was surprised to the greatest degree. So much penetration, so much frankness, created admiration, but did not entirely remove his suspicions. Nevertheless he pressed D'Artagnan's hand and said to him:

"You are an honest youth, but at the present moment I can only do for you that which I just now offered. My hotel will be always open to you. Hereafter, being able to ask for me at all hours and consequently to take advantage of all opportunities, you will probably obtain that which you desire. I promised you a letter for the director of the academy. Are you too proud to accept it, your friend?"

"No, sir," said D'Artagnan, "and I will answer for it that this one shall not fare like the other."

M. de Treville, leaving his young companion in the embrasure of the window, seated himself at a table in order to write the promised letter of recommendation. While he was doing this D'Artagnan looked out of the window.

"No, sir," said D'Artagnan, "and I will answer for it that this one shall not fare like the other."

M. de Treville, leaving his young companion in the embrasure of the window, seated himself at a table in order to write the promised letter of recommendation. While he was doing this D'Artagnan looked out of the window.

M. de Treville after having written the letter sealed it and, rising, approached the young man in order to give it to him. But at the very moment that D'Artagnan stretched out his hand to receive it M. de Treville was highly astonished to see his protégé make a sudden spring, become crimson with passion and rush from the cabinet, crying, "Ah, he shall not escape me this time!"

"Who? Who?" asked M. de Treville.

"He—my thief!" replied D'Artagnan. "Ah, the traitor!" And he disappeared.

"Who? Who?" asked M. de Treville.

"He—my thief!" replied D'Artagnan. "Ah, the traitor!" And he disappeared.

"Who? Who?" asked M. de Treville.

"He—my thief!" replied D'Artagnan. "Ah, the traitor!" And he disappeared.

"He—my thief!" replied D'Artagnan. "Ah, the traitor!" And he disappeared.

"It is one that becomes a man accustomed to look his enemies in the face."

"Ah, I know full well that you don't turn your back to yours!"

Portos formed with rage and made a movement to rush after D'Artagnan. "Presently, presently," cried the latter, "when you haven't your cloak on!"

"At 1 o'clock, then, behind the Luxembourg!"

"Very well, at 1 o'clock, then," replied D'Artagnan, turning the angle of the street.

But neither in the street he had passed through nor in the one which his eager glance pervaded could he see any one. However slowly the unknown had walked, he was gone on his way or perhaps had entered some house. D'Artagnan inquired of every one he met with, but nothing, absolutely nothing!

He began to reflect upon the events that had passed. They were numerous and inauspicious. It was scarcely 11 o'clock in the morning, and yet this morning had already brought him into disgrace with M. de Treville, who could not fail to think the manner in which D'Artagnan had left him a little cavalier.

Besides this, he had drawn upon himself two good duels with two men, each capable of killing three D'Artagnans; with two musketeers—in short, with two of those beings whom he esteemed so greatly that he placed them in his mind and heart above all other men. Reflecting on his conduct, he decided that politeness must be his course in the future.

D'Artagnan, walking and soliloquizing, had arrived within a few steps of the Hotel d'Arquillon and in front of that hotel perceived Aramis chatting gayly with three gentlemen of the king's guards. On his part Aramis perceived D'Artagnan; but, as he had not forgotten that it was Treville had been so angry in the morning and that a witness of the rebuke the musketeer had received was not likely to be at all agreeable, he pretended not to see him.

D'Artagnan was not so dull as not to perceive that he was not wanted. He was seeking in his mind then for the least awkward means of retreat when he remarked that Aramis had let his handkerchief fall and, by mistake, no doubt, had placed his foot upon it, and it appeared a favorable opportunity to replace his intrusion. He stooped and with the most graceful air he could assume drew the handkerchief from under the foot of the musketeer in spite of the efforts the latter made to detain it and, holding it out to him, said:

"I believe, monsieur, that this is a handkerchief you would be sorry to lose."

The handkerchief was, in fact, richly embroidered and had a coronet and arms at one of its corners. Aramis blushed excessively and snatched rather than took the handkerchief from D'Artagnan's hand.

"Ah, ah," cried one of the guards, "will you permit in saying, most discreet Aramis, that you are not on good terms with M. de Holy-Tracy when that gracious lady has the kindness to lend you her handkerchief?"

Aramis darted at D'Artagnan one of those looks which inform a man that he has acquired a mortal enemy, then resumed his mild air.

"You are deceived, gentlemen," said he. "This handkerchief is not mine, and I cannot fancy why monsieur has taken it into his head to offer it to me rather than to one of you, and, as a proof of what I say, here is mine in my pocket."

One of the friends of Aramis was not convinced by his assertion and said with affected seriousness:

"If it were as you pretend it is," said he, "I should be forced, my dear Aramis, to reclaim it myself, for, as you very well know, Holy-Tracy is an intimate friend of mine, and I cannot allow the property of his wife to be sported as a trophy."

"But, my dear intimate friend of Holy-Tracy, I am not less tenderly his friend than you can possibly be, so that decidedly this handkerchief is as likely to have fallen from your pocket as mine," said Aramis.

"No, upon my honor!" cried his majesty's guard.

The young men burst into a loud laugh, and, after having cordially shaken hands, separated.

"Now is my time to make my peace with this gentleman," said D'Artagnan to himself, having stood on one side during the whole of the latter part of the conversation.

"Monsieur," said he, "you will excuse me, I hope."

First Use of Tobacco.

The first pipe smokers, it is claimed, were the medicine men. Tobacco was used in the first place as an incense to burn before the great spirits. The burning of tobacco was an expression of man's homage to him just as the burning of spices, such as frankincense and myrrh, has been in the Orient since time began. Among the Indians from Hudson's Bay to Cape Horn the plant was regarded as sacred, hence the present use, "divine" weed.

Many of the industries located here have grown to an extent that they no longer need home support for their existence. The demand for their products in this and other states may be such that a local demand is not essential—but, while their existence may not be threatened by a lack of loyalty here, yet, their existence in Janesville is. Unless we give of ourselves such loyalty and support as we may, we cannot hope to retain an industry to whose growth with this town is no essential factor.

Persons Answering Fraudulent Advertisements Asked to Notify Gazette.

The Gazette is desirous of keeping out of its columns fraudulent advertising and asks the assistance of its patrons to that end.

There are any number of concerns in the country who make a living through a nicely worded advertisement, offering golden opportunities, and these unscrupulous people find fertile ground for work, among the masses.

Many orders are received in the Gazette mail for advertising which are returned as objectionable and where there is a question as to the qualifications the advertisement is omitted. All newspapers have this experience.

But even with the utmost care there will be an occasional advertisement which will pass the scrutiny of the business department of the paper and find its way into the columns.

The Gazette will deem it a favor if you will report to the office any trouble which may have been experienced through the answering of such an advertisement.
